

Property, Human Rights and Land Surveyors

Paul van der Molen (Netherlands)

Key words: Cadastre; human rights; property; land surveyors

SUMMARY

Land surveyors in their capacity as land professional pursue their profession within the context of human rights law and are thus challenged to entrench human rights and human right approaches in their daily professional duties. The aim of this paper is to review the issue of property within international and regional human rights law and to deduct interfaces with the land surveyor's profession.